View and organize your schedule Quick, easy way to view and organize appointments in your schedule and view them without efforts Live tile support Toggle emphasizing of the next appointment, week number display and location hiding Configurable calendar customization, appearance-related settings and tile customization Organize your activities in an efficient way: view appointments, check public holidays, share them with friends and colleagues or even add an on the spot reminder If you have ever been short a few dollars, you will know that when your money is low, you often have to make more and more compromises. If you are short on cash, then your financial situation probably has left you frustrated with many of your everyday expenses. It is likely that you have had to cut corners when it comes to your daily spending habits. In this day and age, taking a few hours to prepare yourself a nice meal is hardly something one can do. Unfortunately, not every day is a good day for cooking. Some days, you just can't be bothered. Here are some quick tips that can help you manage your money so that it is easier for you to spend as much time as you want to when you want to, but not have to. Tell other people about your financial problems If you have friends and family to turn to when you're in a tight spot, they can help you out. Most of us like to keep our troubles a secret, but you don't have to. The truth is, you're not alone. Most people who are struggling with a financial problem also have friends and family members who can help them out. For example, you can share your situation with someone who is in need of finances, as well as someone who is in need of advice. Making a request for help is often the best thing that you can do when you find yourself in a difficult situation. People will be able to provide you with advice and also offer you money, and it won't look like you're being a burden. Become more aware of your expenses When you have a handle on your finances, you can become more aware of how you spend money. At the same time, you will probably be more in control of your spending. If you find yourself struggling to make ends meet, you can look into your spending. You might have to make some changes in order to get back on track. Take a look at how much you spend on different expenses. Some expenses might be frivolous. If you
