What's New in the?

HS-52 is a software for the efficient evaluation of hydrogenated tallow (PTFE) and fluorocarbon polymers according to ASTM D2256 and FDA. The program calculates the required temperature as well as the time necessary to reach the investigated temperature. The main job of the program is to calculate the required Tmax for different analysis methods. When using the program, you can choose between the standard method or the non-standard method. An example is the method to determine the CT using UV scans, which is not considered a standard method of the AASHTO. The program currently contains methods for PTFE/CFRP, PTFE/PEEK, and PTFE/Epoxy and is planned to be expanded to cover PTFE/Nylon, PTFE/PET, PTFE/PMMA, PTFE/Polyurethane (PU), PTFE/SU-8, PTFE/Vacuum metallization, and PTFE/ABS. The main purpose of HS-52 is to evaluate PTFE tubes with a diameter of 1.5 to 4.0 m, which is planned to be extended to cover tubes with diameters from 1.0 to 8.0 m. In addition, the program may be used to evaluate other polymeric materials by measuring the temperature of the samples or cross-section profiles with UV-active scanner. Importers will be able to apply for licenses and see a list of available distributors. Sales Partners will be able to see a list of available applicants. Professional users can specify which countries they want to work with by using the profile settings in the program. The PTFE Compliance Reports Generator is an early tool to help PTFE and PTFE composites producers to comply with the ASTM D2256 and NFPA 70E standards. The tool offers two options: to generate a Standard or a Technical file. This tool is part of a study mission to help to comply with the industry standards while developing its business. This tool is an intermediate level tool and is primarily designed for companies developing their in house program for the D2256 and NFPA 70E standards. In order to create a Technical report, the user simply needs to follow the flowchart published in each tool. The Technical reports are usually used in the design stage for the testing and for the validation of the supplier quality. The Standard reports
