Ghost Pirates is a pretty sweet little game, but then it just keeps on giving, and giving, and giving. This is one of those games that was released between this year and last year, so the Wii has the opportunity to enjoy this game this year, and the 3DS will have it next year. Those of you who know Bill Tiller's writing will recognize the name that the game is named after. Now normally I'm not one to go on and on about writing, but in this case I'm going to. Ghost Pirates is written, of course by Bill Tiller, as his previous game, Vampyre Story. In this game you have the opportunity to be one of the three main characters, a human, a ghost, and a pirate. The story is pretty straight forward, as you are one of these characters trying to find their bodies and return to them. Now your body has been transformed into a ghost by Vooju magic, and that Vooju magic can be used, of course, in a few different ways. This is a very cute game, and an interesting concept. You are a ghost, and you can find a body. There is a fixed amount of time that you can have in a body before you go and haunt your soul. Within the time that you have you can visit different places to speak with the friends that you made while you were a living person. You can also use Vooju magic to solve puzzles within the game. What's new:

of Oz My life has changed in many ways. I guess that is probably because I have been working in the area of youth ministry these days. I've been a youth pastor/comms pastor for over 10 years, and have done talks, workshops and sermons for many years. The past few years, however, have been a bit of a wake-up call. Do I really understand why we are here? What are the 3 Big Blocks? What does the Trinity actually mean? Wait a minute, am I good enough? Where am I going? Where is he going? What is the point? How can I raise the dead? So, I have been thinking more lately about Advent and Jesus coming as the Masque of Youth. And I sure hope you do too. The Jesus and Masque of Youth Immanuel's Gift I am impressed with the work that our friends at Immanuel did in equipping the youth of this country. For those of us who were involved in all this, it was a whirlwind of activity. But they had a vision, and did whatever they had to do to make sure it happened. The finale for the Messiah College Masque of Youth took place this weekend. When we arrived at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, the warm-up act was just finishing. What a talented group. Brothers Matt Cain, Adam Breedlove, and Gavin Barnes, joined forces with a tight, beautiful bass-guitar attack to honor our divine stars of the evening. As I scooted to the edge of my seat to see what was going to happen on stage, all I could think about was, "What is waiting for us up there?" Wow. It was a breathtaking, ahh experience. I was in total awe. The displays were spectacular. The lighting was breathtaking. The music and the dancing was phenomenal. And the Divine the air was saturated with a marvelousness that we're not used to any more. It was brilliant. The crowd was buzzing about being there and taking in the experience. Everyone was so excited for what the evening would bring. The Youth Choir of Immanuel which did the interludes for the band were on their feet and their faces lit up. Each and every one of them was engaged in this unique experience. Their faces and their voices said it all. They were so excited to have a place for us to be. They were so happy to serve as spiritual conduits for us to link Jesus to the crowd
