All the premium APK files of the game at apk4fun.com.Q: how to code a smooth-edge bevel after trying to edit out most of a rectangle by beveling it, i'd like to edit the last couple of pixels to make the rectangle smooth. I've found this tutorial and am using the bevel toolbox. I've tried to use the vertex tool and the edge tool but i only ever get the outline of the rectangle when using vertex tool and get a pointy edge when using edge tool. I want to edit some pixel's color at the two corners (so basically an inner bevel) Is there a way to smooth that last bit out using python without having to use blender's console? A: I don't know if there's an easier way or not, but you can use python to do what you want. I assume here that you know how to access the blender's python API. Add the bevel modifier and leave it at the default settings: add a vertex and move the bevel modifier for the effect you want to create: Select all vertices with bevel selected and press Alt+B, that's the python command to select all vertices with the bevel modifier selected: Create a loop that checks if the normal of a vertex is above 0.1, if so, change the color of that vertex to an other one: You can further tweak the code in the end to adapt it to your needs. Here's an example of the finished script:

import bpy
context = bpy.context
scn = context.scene
for i in range(scn.objects.active.data.vertices.get_len
()):
    sel = i % 4
    sel += 1
    if scn.objects.active.data.vertices[sel].is_selected else 0
    if sel == 0:
        norm = scn.objects.active.data.vertices[sel].normal
if norm.z > 0.1:
