"White", "Yellow", "Black"); I tried $arr = explode("", "Red,Blue,Green,White,Yellow,Black"); Why my code does not work and give me an error? A: Your code should work fine - you just have an error in your string: $arr = explode("", "Red,Blue,Green,White,Yellow,Black"); or $arr = explode("", "Red,Blue,Green,White, Yellow,Black", ","); assuming a comma instead of a space between your double quotes. A: explode() takes a second argument, the string to split, and a third argument, whether or not to return the values. Since you only have one argument, I believe you should use explode(" ", "Red,Blue,Green,White,Yellow,Black") A: You need to add the second delimiter into your explode call. // explode(" ", 'Red,Blue,Green,White,Yellow,Black'); // explode("", "Red,Blue,Green,White,Yellow,Black"); I presume you want the space between the two string, as in your original example, so it looks like you need to add the space delimiter into the 2nd argument to explode. You can read more about the explode() function in the PHP documentation here: There is one exception: if $del 6d1f23a050
