Modo Indie can be run from a login account. To do this login to the Modo Indie software, select the “Open A New Simulator” option from the “File” menu. When selecting to open a new simulator, Modo Indie will ask the “In Use?” question. Selecting “Yes” will open the Modo Indie software as a new Sim. Selecting “No” will allow Modo Indie to continue without restarting the current simulation. The first time you run Modo Indie a new scene will be created for you. Simply double clicking on the root_folder_of_your_scene will load the scene. Modo Indie will give you a notice that it has created a new scene, but will ask if you want to use that scene. At this point, it is recommended that you set the scene to be the active scene in the Properties Pane. The modifier_command_line_tool is the default modifier with the Modo Indie. It is a fully standalone tool that allows you to script your own modifiers. The tool gives you control over the input and output parameters, so you can send the same data to many different modifiers. When you first start the command line tool, you will be given a prompt that is similar to the one you get when you open the regular tool. Modo Indie also has an ini file viewer tool that allows you to browse your ini files. Modo Indie will automatically pull all of the ini values from the scene that contains the ini file. In the example below, we have a scene and the obj template file named “fubar.obj.blend”. If we open that scene, and open the file inside of the template file and view the ini file, we can see the information that was exported from the template file. 5ec8ef588b
